

Maritime Folklore & Myths Surrounding New York & Long Island

Please join us as we welcome Brooke Franks, ABD, PhD Candidate at Stony Brook University, and former intern of the Long Island Maritime Museum. As a social and cultural historian of early modern Britain and the Atlantic, Brooke finds fascination in the mysterious. Pack your waders as she plunges waist deep into these nautical mysteries.

The ocean never stops moving. Its mysteries; drawing you in. Come with me as we explore maritime folklore and tall tales surrounding New York and Long Islands' legendary waters.

From the ghost of the Fire Island lighthouse, to the shipwreck of the Elizabeth, and even the story of the Sea Emerald - said to haunt the Great South Bay with no Captain or crew; these stories are "shore" to send a chill down your spine.
